Biancke's has second fire

By BECKY BARNES, Editor

The Sunday morning fire that closed Biancke's for the second time in less than nine months could have been a lot worse, according to the 25-year-old owner Mary Todd Ashbrook.

About 10:30 a.m., while the Sunday morning crowd was having coffee and breakfast, smoke began seeping through the cracks in the floor.

Ashbrook said she was in her apartment above the restaurant when Jan Taylor Wilson called to tell her that something was wrong. The floor was shaking and smoke was filling up the dining room.

Mary Todd and her husband, J.D., have only recently moved back into their apartment after it was damaged in the June fire that closed the historic Biancke's for several months.

Ashbrook said she thinks having gone through the first fire helped her handle Sunday's fire with a little more calm.

"I thought, 'I'm going to put this fire out,'" she said, laughing at herself.

She grabbed the flashlight

MARY TODD ASHBROOK

and fire extinguisher and headed to the basement with two cooks and Scott Grannis, customer and friend.

Thankfully, she said, the emergency responders were quick to arrive.

"There was a lot of smoke," she said of the basement. "Once I turned the corner where the main distribution box is, you could see where the flames were and that they were contained to the box."

In the hours and days since, she has gone from thinking she would be open the following day or, at the very most a couple of days, to a 17-day wait on an electrical fitting.

Tuesday, Ashbrook was told that the back-ordered part was found. Therefore, work has begun to make repairs.

Ashbrook said she is not going to settle for just making repairs this time. She wants everything rewired.

While she doesn't have a time line of when the restaurant will re-open, she vows that it will be back open as soon as possible.

June's fire was also an electrical issue.

Even though both were electrical in nature, Ashbrook said this one was completely different.

"There is a ton of work to be done, but there's not nearly the loss," she said, noting that her insurance should cover the majority of the repairs.

"Of course, yet again, I'm surrounded by good people who keep me sane and help me through it," she said.

"I've learned not to give up," she said. "Within 30 minutes of the fire there were 30 people here helping."

She said she never thought the first fire would ever have happened to her, much less a second one only months later.

Ashbrook bought Biancke's four and one-half years ago. It was where she waitressed while in high school and a dream come true for the young lady who wasn't even old enough to sign for a liquor license.

"You don't think 'I'm going to give up,' you think 'what am I going to do?'" Ashbrook said.

Fayette robbery suspect nabbed in Walnut St. home

By JOSH SHEPHERD, News Writer

Harrison County and Cynthiana law enforcement arrested a man Friday morning at a Walnut Street apartment who was wanted in connection with an armed robbery in Lexington on Jan. 31.

Eric Paul Nelson, 35, listed as living in Boyle County, was in custody hours after arriving in Cynthiana. A warrant had been issued for Nelson's arrest for his role in the armed robbery of a Speedway gas station at the corner of 7th Street and Broadway in Lexington.

Another arrest warrant for Nelson had been issued recently from the Boyle County Sheriff's Department for his failure to comply with sex offender registration. Nelson was convicted on charges of raping a 13-year-old several years ago.

Acting on information that Nelson was inside Cynthiana city limits, police officers Wilbur Gross and Walter Tapp joined with deputies Robert Peak and Nathan Gasser to take the fugitive into custody.

Based on information that Nelson had a history of violent altercations with police and

Grievance hearing ends with recommendations

By BECKY BARNES, Editor

Months after nine Cynthiana police officers filed grievances with the Cynthiana City Commission against Chief Ray Johnson, the issue is settled.

The commission voted unanimously Thursday afternoon to merge a sexual harassment complaint made by the city's only female officer, Dottie Batte, with the other grievance.

There were nine active officers with the department who signed the complaint as well as one former officer. Each of the officers testified during the hearing, which began on Jan. 27 and continued over two days.

According to the commission's statement and findings, each of the officers testified that there was a lack of communication between members of the department and the chief.

They also cited low morale within the department, an investigation into a "Topix" posting which officers believed was not handled correctly and disciplinary action taken by the chief that officers felt was unfair and inappropriate.

The commission's statement also acknowledged testimony citing lack of department meetings, lack of attendance at roll calls, lack of career counseling and lack of a promotional board.

Other complaints were regarding the chief receiving a new weapon with night sights and receiving under carriage lights on his cruiser.

"The grievance made reference to corruption, however, upon cross-examination, none of the witnesses were able to give specific examples and several witnesses admitted that the word 'corruption' may have been used loosely in the complaint," according to the commission's findings and order.

Several of the officers testified that communication has improved since the grievance was filed.

The assistant chief testified that the proposed resolution of the grievance would be to appoint a new chief.

However, the commission stated that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant dismissal of the chief.

"The commission cannot help but be concerned about the morale in the police department and the fact that at least nine of the current 13

MCTC to host Super Sunday

Representatives from Maysville Community and Technical College (MCTC) were in attendance when Gov. Steve Beshear proclaimed Feb. 23 as the Kentucky Community and Technical College System (KCTCS) Super Sunday Day in Kentucky during a press event on Thursday, Feb. 6, 2014 at the Capitol.

Super Sunday is an annual outreach initiative specifically for African-American and Latino students.

On Feb. 23, MCTC and each of the KCTCS colleges will partner with African-American and Latino churches in their communities to host information fairs for prospective college students and their families.

“We are working with community leaders and pastors because churches are a vital part of the African-American community and we recognize the importance of meeting students where they work and live,” said MCTC President Dr. Ed Story.

In addition to the governor, the press event was attended by KCTCS President Michael B. McCall, KCTCS Board of Regents Chair P.G. Peoples and representatives from all of the 16 colleges, including outstanding African-American alumni named to the Super Sunday Hall of Fame. Also in attendance were state legislators, community leaders and pastors from several of the participating churches.

“We want students to know...Yes, you can go to college. Yes, you can get a college degree. And yes, you can have a high-paying job,” said KCTCS President Dr. Michael B. McCall. “Events like Super Sunday are essential to helping students connect with advocates who will help them understand the wide range of career and educational offerings avail-

On Super Sunday, more than 5,000 prospective college students and their families are expected to attend the statewide college fairs sponsored by KCTCS and its 16 colleges. MCTC will host events in Maysville at Scott United Methodist Church in partnership with Mt. Pisqua Baptist Church, in Paris at Zion Baptist Church and in Mt. Sterling at Evergreen Baptist Church.

“This is our first year to host an event in Mt. Sterling and we are really excited to partner with to Evergreen Baptist Church,” said Russ Ward, MCTC Rowan Campus Director. “I think the community will really enjoy this event.”

Services at each church will be followed by lunch and a college fair to assist and inform those interested in attending college about financial aid, the admissions process, programs and classes offered at MCTC, how to transfer credits to a four year college and more.

Super Sunday is patterned after a highly successful program at California State University, now in its eight year, that is credited with substantially increasing the college-going rate of African-American students in California.

Mr. Mojo brings message to empower Harrison County students

By JOSH SHEPHERD, News Writer
“Every person in every school can make a difference” was the key message that Mr. Mojo, a nationally celebrated anti-bullying spokesperson, brought to Harrison County school students Monday.
Mr. Mojo, also known as Travis Brown, is the high energy spokesperson behind a national campaign to address school bullying. His “No Bullying” tour has received backing from the MTV cable channel and several major media outlets nationwide.
The program is in high demand at public schools across the country and booking a presentation at Harrison County was no easy chore.
In fact, credit for arranging Mr. Mojo’s appearance at the high school goes to parent sponsor and leader of the Harrison County Anti-Bully club, Kelli Burrier.
Burrier has four children in the Harrison County school system. She and her club members have been working to bring Mr. Mojo’s message to the school system for several months at least, Jenny Lynn Hatter, school director of instruction, said.

The cost for Mr. Mojo’s all day appearance at Harrison County was covered by the Office Depot Foundation and by a grant from the One Direction Foundation, a special foundation sponsored by the pop music group.
The effort paid off well. During President’s Day, a day that students would normally have off, every elementary, middle and high school student was treated to Mr. Mojo’s combination of high energy and personal testimony.
The presentation kicked off with a variation of the game, Simon Says, which puts the students into high spirits before Brown began his message.
He cautioned students about being aware of how words they use can hurt. A student who doesn’t fit in with a person’s definition of “normal” can become the object of ridicule.

He cited one instance where a girl named Jessica was a new student at a school. Unlike most students, he said that Jessica had unusually short hair and for that reason became the subject of student’s laughter and teasing.
“The students didn’t realize that this girl was a cancer survivor. That she had gone through therapy that had caused her hair to fall out,” Brown told students.
He explained that students frequently misunderstand how it feels to be singled out from the group and made the object of insults and gossip. Bullying, he said, pushes people to their edge and for some, that edge can be dangerous.
“We don’t know where a person’s ‘edge’ is - that place where they will no longer be pushed. For some people, that edge can be dangerous,” Mr. Mojo said.
For other people, they deal with their pain by deciding to deliver pain of their own on other people. Others try to numb the pain through the use of drugs and alcohol, he said.

“Others commit suicide. Suicide is a permanent solution to a temporary situation. You have to know that, no matter what, things will get better,” he said. “My parents divorced when I was two. My mom and I had nothing, barely even a place to live. I didn’t know if things would ever get better, but they did.”
Brown urged students to resist the temptation to join with bullies - those people who always talk negative about everything. A bully, he said, is a person who sets out to intentionally hurt, harm, or humiliate people.
But worse, by far, than the bully, he said, are the bystanders who do nothing and let the abuse happen.
Mojo cited an instance where a woman was beaten to death outside of a nightclub. There were several people who made videos of the beating and posted them on the internet. These were later used as evidence.

“Not one person holding a cell phone got involved. Nobody used their phone to call authorities. The people there were willing to record it, but not a single person reached out to stop it,” he said.
He urged students not to join in with the “haters,” but also not to be among the bystanders who stand and watch.
He called on students to “MojoUp” and be accepting of people’s differences.
“My presentation here is just a band-aid,” he concluded, “You all have to be a part of the cure that happens afterward.”
For more information about the Mojo no bullying tour and information on the set of tools to reduce incidences of bullying at school, visit the website at nobullyingtour.com.

Black ice creates commuter nightmare; 11 accidents in four hours

By JOSH SHEPHERD, News Writer
The Harrison County Sheriff’s office had its hands full early Tuesday morning when black ice caused 11 car wrecks, four of them injury accidents, within a four-hour time span.
One is likely to involve charges, according to Harrison County Sheriff Bruce Hampton.
On a day in which snow and ice were expected to melt, black ice patches caught many morning commuters by surprise, according to Hampton and deputy sheriff Robert Peak.

Among the wrecks were two on US 27, four on US 62, another on KY 1842, and another two on White Oak Pike, Peak said.
The spree started happening around 4:30 a.m. and within two hours, the auto accidents began to accumulate.
“The rain last night and the warmer temperatures in the forecast made people a little overconfident on the roads,” Hampton said.

All the morning wrecks were black ice related and most, thankfully, were fender benders resulting in few injuries.
The majority of accidents occurred at the same spot on US 62 involving the same large patch of ice. Four traffic accidents occurred at that spot,” Hampton said.

Unfortunately, one of those single-vehicle accidents wound up being an injury accident and the driver is likely to face some charges.
According to the accident report, a truck driven by Robert Preston Quillen of Cynthiana was heading east on US 62 W about 10 miles outside of town when it started sliding off the road to the right.
The driver over corrected left and right, sending the car into an 180 degree spin into the metal guardrail.

The driver and two of the passengers were injured and transported by ambulance to have their injuries treated.
Quillen was cited for driving without a license and for not wearing a seat belt. He was also treated for a laceration to his forehead, Hampton said.

Daniel Cline was also named as a defendant in three trials.
He faces six counts of second degree criminal possession of a forged instrument, two counts officers feel that there is a substantial lack of communication within the department,” the order states.

The statement went on to say that it is the duty of the chief and assistant chief to ensure that all officers are trained and that they conduct themselves in a professional manner.
At Thursday’s meeting, the commission issued the following order:
•That the chief of police and the assistant chief work together to develop a detailed plan to improve communication and morale within the department.
•The plan will be specific and will contain a time line for implementation of each point of emphasis and recommendation.

•Both chiefs will sign off on the plan and be responsible for implementation of the plan upon approval of the safety commissioner.
•The chiefs will seek input from the sergeants and corporal, who will seek input from the officers as the plan is developed.
•The plan is to be submitted to the safety commissioner no later than March 15.
The order cited the Southern Police Institute recommendations as possibly being helpful in detailing their own plan.
In a letter to the chief and each of the officers, the commission stated, “Employees can only give what is expected of them and those expectations must be appropriately communicated.”

Louisville attorney, David Fuller, who was legal counsel for the officers through the Fraternal Order of Police, said Tuesday that he felt the commission took everything seriously.
“I think they expect changes,” Fuller said. “If they do what the report says, then that’s what the police wanted and they should be OK.”

James Thomas, Cynthiana, who represented Johnson, could not be reached before press time.

Teenagers can sometimes be

The fire that forced Biancke's Restaurant to close briefly left the harriCYN Community Theater without a venue for advance ticket sales to "Give'Em Hell, Harry," which runs Friday and Saturday night at the Harrison County High School auditorium. Therefore, tickets will be sold at the door. The new weekend movies at the Cinemark and Regal play multiple times all weekend and most will last two weeks at least, so nothing is going to be missed there. "Give'Em Hell Harry," on the other hand, plays only Friday and Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. at the high school. It's $10 a seat and every seat in the house is good. I have had an opportunity to see Doug Stephens perform briefly as President Harry S. Truman and you can trust me - this is a one-man show not to be missed this weekend.

Since we are on the subject of one-man shows, I had the privilege of sitting in on the Mr. Mojo presentation at the high school on Monday. There was a lot to admire about the anti-bullying message and Travis Brown's unique style. It was especially impressive how quickly parents and school leaders have responded to the challenge it set for itself since the community meeting at the high school last November. Kelli Burrier and the other parents and school leaders in the anti-bullying club deserve the community's appreciation for bringing "MojoUp!" to Harrison County. Like Mr. Mojo said, though, it's a band-aid. Just a start, but a solid one, nonetheless.

What I loved most I'll tell you what I loved most about this presentation? Seeing schools do exactly what I think schools do best. They put every kid in the system into that auditorium to hear Mr. Mojo speak. The MojoUp message probably didn't reach every student, but they were in the auditorium to hear that message. I love to do that kind of stuff with my teenagers, too. I don't claim to be an expert on the teenage mind. However, from five consecutive years of hosting a different teenager in the foreign exchange program, the similarities between so ... generic

Josh Shepherd
News Writer

American and foreign teenagers amaze and infuriate me.

Teenagers are so ... generic.

One thing my wife and I like to do for our exchange students during the year is take trips to places that make Kentucky unique. Every year there is usually weekend trip to Cave City, a day at the races at Keeneland or Churchill Downs — which also involves a visit to the Louisville Slugger museum.

Last week, I bought four tickets and took Lea and two other exchange students to Meadowgreen Park in Clay City to see the Grascals play a bluegrass show.

We've also taken them camping at a state park. A major highlight of their year was coming to the heart of Cynthiana for the Rod Run last August.

But we understand that the kids want to see more than just the Bluegrass, so in different years we have taken them on trips to major US cities like Las Vegas, New Orleans, Nashville, Chicago, Orlando and Washington D.C.

The two sides of every city

As adults, we all know that major cities the world over have two sides.

There are the things that make every city unique. Chicago, for example, has Wrigley Field and the Cubs (sorry, White Sox. You're just not the same.) It has the Bears, of course, and the ugly est football stadium in the NFL — (what's been done to expand Soldier Field is hideous.)

I could spend hours wandering around Lincoln Park and there is a perfectly wonderful hole-in-the-wall bourbon bar in the center of town called Delilah's. Then there's the Field Museum, Shedd Aquarium, The Best Hot Dogs in the entire universe, especially at Superdawg near Skokie, and their pizza ... is okay, I guess. (To those of you who just gasped, I'm sorry. I'm not a deep dish pizza fan.)

Chicago is the birthplace of Second City improv comedy, the Blue Man Group and the Steppenwolf Theater and a whole bunch of other stuff that I don't have the space to list.

But when I take my teenagers there and where is the place they want to go first? The Hard Rock Cafe or the Cheesecake Factory out in the suburbs.

Michigan Avenue shopping is choked with department stores whose interiors are an exact replica of those I see at Kenwood Mall in Cincinnati.

I'm sorry. I did not travel the entire length of Indiana to visit Kenwood Mall.

But I have learned that this is how the teenage mind works — it gravitates to the generic because it fears new experiences.

We've all experienced the frustration of convincing teenagers to try new foods.

"Can't I just order chicken fingers?"

It was the same when I was younger. I wanted to go where the big crowds gathered. It was safe and I associated the mass of humanity — and the 45-minute wait times for a table — as somehow cool. I've forgotten why.

But when we get older, we learn that most of the really good stuff is where the crowds are thinner.

As a hostparent, I sometimes see that my job is to do exactly like the schools do.

I buy tickets to the plays, tours, games and the restaurants and let them know that we're going to do this stuff.

I've learned that exposing kids to "this stuff" will not result in a sudden change in attitude. Or, in the case of your own kids, even gratitude. But that's okay. After they reach their 20s, the brain releases chemicals that cause young people to become adults and the things they appreciate are the unique experiences they had growing up.

Teachers are frequent witnesses to this phenomena.

Let me suggest a good way to start. Tickets to "Give'em Hell, Harry" this weekend.

Berryresident thanks magistrate for work

To the editor:

This has been a trying winter for all the citizens of Harrison County and for our City of Berry. I want to publicly thank our Magistrate Larry Wells for his tremendous help in clearing some of the streets and driveways in the city. We have many people including myself, who do not have the equipment to remove snow.

On behalf of myself and the citizens of Berry, we are deeply grateful for all those who make our city a better place to live. Without the help of people like Magistrate Larry Wells and County Judge Alex Barnett, who have worked tirelessly for the needs and concerns of Berry, we would be hard pressed to do the work with our limited resources.

We sincerely appreciate their spirit of volunteering for the benefit for the citizens of Berry.

MCTC stages lock-down drill at LVC campus

By JOSH SHEPHERD, News Writer

City police and sheriff's deputies helped carry out a lockdown drill at the Licking Valley Campus of Maysville Community College last week. The drill was meant to clarify security procedures in case a shooter is reported on the campus or in the educational building.

Similar lockdown drills are being run at all five Maysville Community and Technical College (MCTC) sites, said Jeff Stevens, director of safety and security at all of the college campuses.

Shooters randomly opening fire in public places are becoming commonplace. Though no event has approached the tragedy of the Virginia Tech University incident six years ago, instances of shootings on college campuses persist, Stevens said.

In many cases, gun violence from a domestic dispute accidentally spills over on to a college campus. In January 2013, a parking lot at the Hazard campus of the Kentucky Community and Technical College System became the scene of a tragic triple murder that had nothing at all to do with the college, said Stevens.

Because of this incident, and others occurring without warning across the country, the MCTC administration endorsed holding annual emergency lockdown drills to prepare in case such an emergency should crop up, he said. "The safety of our students, staff and faculty is critically important. We appreciate all the efforts directed toward this goal," K. Bruce Florence, LVC campus director, commented following the drill.

Though there have been several dozen instances of campus violence, Stevens said that few colleges conduct these kinds of drills. Of those that do, they often don't involve the entire campus. But each of the MCTCS sites will engage everyone on campus each year, he said.

"It's important for students and staff to know what to do and where to go if a lockdown is issued. They also need to know what local law enforcement will be doing and what emergency medical staff will be doing," Stevens said.

Stevens said he was impressed with the speed that emails and text messages went out announcing the drill.

"Our info got out to students and staff in under a minute. All doors were locked and the professors didn't allow us to talk our way in," Stevens said.

Cynthiana and Harrison County law enforcement participated in the drills. Next year, Stevens anticipates the drills to be slightly more elaborate with medical emergency responders involved as well as police.

"The officers also gave us feedback about how we can improve procedures. We appreciate their help," Stevens said.

Celebrity chef and Kentucky artist join Project Playground for 'Beat the Boredom' series

Chef Brigitte Nguyen

Project Playground fundraiser promises to combat the winter blues with its upcoming "Beat the Boredom" series.

The "Beat the Boredom" series of events features two unique experiences and will raise funds for local playground equipment.

On Saturday, March 1, a Yoga + Celebrity Chef event brings Chef Brigitte Nguyen – as seen on Food Network, Cooking Channel and Kentucky Proud Kitchen – to Cynthiana.

The Yoga + Celebrity Chef event begins at 10 a.m. at The Prizing House with two simultaneous 90-minute yoga sessions. The Intro to Yoga session, taught by Ashley Ford, covers the basics of yoga, as well as breathing exercises.

The Intermediate session, taught by Mandy Gossett-Thornton, is designed for those who either know some basic yoga poses or already participate in other types of regular exercise.

Both classes include hands-on instruction and take-home information for people wishing to continue yoga practice on their own.

"Don't be intimidated by the word 'yoga,'" said Emily Vance Ammerman. "This is a great way to learn some basic yoga regardless of your fitness level."

After the yoga sessions, attendees can mingle at the smoothie bar with freshly blended smoothie selections.

At noon, Nguyen kicks off the three-course lunch with a cooking demo and discusses menu selection, cooking techniques and some of her favorite recipes.

The three-course plated lunch includes fresh ingredients and a focus on regional and healthy selections, all with Nguyen's gourmet touch. Each guest will also receive Brigitte's take-home recipes.

"This is going to be a fabulous day where you get to spend time with your friends trying out new things like yoga," Rebecca Gossett McCauley of the Project Playground fundraising committee said. "And, who can pass up a lunch by such a great chef?"

The Project Playground committee is raising funds to purchase playground equipment for younger children at Flat Run Veteran's Park.

The committee has already raised $12,000 toward its $40,000 goal. Project Playground is affiliated with the Cynthiana Arts Council, and donations are tax-deductible.

"I see the Yoga + Celebrity Chef event being a day of laughs, a great atmosphere, beautiful location, and a little pampering," said committee member Cassie Moses.

A second event in the series is a Wine + Beer + Canvas event on the evening of April 12, also at The Prizing House.

This date night or girls-night-out event features a wine and beer tasting, and Kentucky artist Julie Kearns Coy will guide attendees step-by-step through their choice of paintings.

Each attendee gets to take their finished canvas home at the end of the event. Wine, beer, and gourmet cheeses will be available for purchase.

Tickets for the Beat the Boredom events are $45 each and can be purchased at Smith Insurors, 130 E. Pike St., over the phone by calling Rebecca Gossett McCauley at 859-588-1793 or directly from any committee member.

LVC basketball team to play Friday at City Hall

Basketball has been one answer this winter to the need for a student activity schedule for Licking Valley Campus students.

Tracy Stamper and Trina Shields collaborated with officials at City Hall and worked hard to encourage participation. The opportunity is open for men and women students, staff members and faculty.

Five sessions are on the schedule for this winter's game times and practices.

The first intramural game was Feb. 7. Others are planned for Feb. 21, March 14 and March 21.

These activity nights are in session for two hours beginning at 6 p.m. Families are welcome as are any member of the community who would like to watch the Hilltop Blues work out winter kinks, build up their breath control and laugh a lot.

Other activities that are on the drawing board for students include Fun Friday with music and entertainment. It is also hoped an intramural softball activity can be scheduled.

Withers named associate provost of undergraduate education

Benjamin C. Withers, who has led the University of Kentucky Division of Undergraduate Education at the interim level, has been named the associate provost for undergraduate education. He officially took over the position Feb. 1.

The announcement was made by Provost Christine Riordan at the recommendation of the search committee, led by Scott Kelley, and consisting of the following members:

- Associate Professor Ruth Beattie, Department of Biology;
- Assistant Director of Academic Initiatives Trisha Clement, Residence Life;
- Associate Professor of Early Adolescent Literacy Laurie Henry, Department of Education Curriculum and Instruction;
- Professor Robert Houtz, Department of Horticulture;
- Gatton Endowed Professor of Marketing Scott Kelley, Department of Marketing and Supply Chain;
- Associate Professor

BENJAMIN WITHERS

Darlene Welsh, College of Nursing; and Associate Provost Don Witt, Enrollment Management.

“Dr. Withers has played an essential role, both through his leadership in undergraduate education and as director of the Honors Program, in promoting academic excellence at UK,” Riordan said. “He brings tremendous passion and extraordinary skill in teaching. He also brings strong experience in establishing collaborative, functional solutions for enhancing student success, a key component of Dr. Capilouto’s vision for our institution.”

As interim associate provost for undergraduate education, Withers oversaw the reorganization of the Division of Undergraduate Education, creating the Academy for Undergraduate Excellence, which includes the Office of Undergraduate Research, Chellgren Center, Gaines Center for the Humanities and other units emphasizing academic innovation and challenge for undergraduate students across the university.

As a faculty leader throughout the UK’s general education reform efforts, Withers provided, and continues to provide, expertise in developing innovations for UK Core -- a program that has received national accolades for its emphasis on creativity.

Withers also led the discussions and opera-tionalization of the new graduation writing requirements for all UK undergraduate degrees, as well as the development of the university’s undergraduate certificate programs, serving as the dean for UK’s first certificate program offering in global studies.

In directing the UK Honors Program, Withers oversaw the development and implementation of a new, improved curriculum, while the program broke records in terms of number of applicants and level of academic quality for the fall class of 2013.

Withers, a professor of art history, served previously as chair of the UK Department of Art (now the UK School of Art and Visual Studies), and as assistant dean of the Raclin School of the Arts at Indiana University.

A native of Harrison County, Ky., he earned his bachelor’s degree from Carleton College, and his master’s degree and doctorate from the University of Chicago, where he developed research interests in early medieval art.

His work on illustration in Anglo-Saxon biblical texts, construction and design of illustrated books has been published by the University of Toronto Press, The Index of Christian Art, and the Medieval Institute Press as well as several leading scholarly periodicals, including the Art Bulletin, Anglo-Saxon England and the Old English Newsletter.

Withers’ research has been supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Ameritech/SBC Foundation, the Whiting Foundation and Indiana University President’s Arts and Humanities Initiative, among others.

Nationally, Withers has served as a board member on the College Board’s AP Higher Education Advisory Committee, an organizing board member of the International Center for Medieval Art, as well as a member of several committees of the College Art Association.

Superintendent evaluation process undergoing major changes

By JOSH SHEPHERD, News Writer

Through a complete reworking of the evaluation system of superintendents, the Kentucky Department of Education appears to be taking a more proactive role in ensuring that district superintendents are providing local school boards with information critical to the continuous improvement of that state’s school systems.

But there is a question whether the new evaluation system will inspire districts to implement improvements or simply create another layer of bureaucracy that gets in the way of educator’s efforts.

Harrison County School Superintendent Andy Dotson; David Case, assistant superintendent; and Harrison Director of School Improvement, Jenny Lynn Hatter, are all at the front line to help educators in the local school system implement the evaluation system.

School performance assessment is much more sweeping than just changing the evaluation process of the superintendent, Dotson said. The changes will also affect school principals and educators.

Aside from the larger question of whether this new system of evaluation interferes with education, Harrison County’s central office has had its hands full making the transition to all these new evaluation processes.

Ironically, Harrison County Schools is among the systems selected to implement pilot programs for teacher and principal performance evaluations. It is not, however, required to implement the full changes in the superintendent evaluation process – which is the only school system evaluation that is broadcast to the general public.

“Schools go through these systemic changes probably more often than anyone likes,” Hatter said. “But we constantly ask students to learn advanced subjects at earlier ages. Our mission is to make students college and career-ready when they graduate. So we have to ask more from our educators and leaders.

“Everyone complains about how we are always changing the way we do things, but we understand that it’s necessary.”

When it comes to public accountability for school performance, though, the buck stops at the school superintendent’s office.

Changes in the structure of the education system may have changed some of the functions of an elected school board, but it still retains its primary and, many could argue, most critical function – the hiring and firing of the school superintendent.

The school board has the authority to set goals for the superintendent and reward them for an effective leadership, such as playing their role in improving school performance system-wide, or it can withhold those rewards for an underperforming system. At least that is how the system is supposed to function on paper.

There are numerous examples, Dotson said, when school districts have reached a crisis situation because an administration that allowed things to get worse and withheld critical information from its elected board.

“One of the reasons the state is expanding the evaluation process for my position is to prevent that sort of situation from happening,” Dotson said.

In addition to the superintendent’s annual performance evaluation that the school board conducts every spring, new regulations require that the superintendent’s office provide Terry Holliday, Ph.D., the Kentucky Commissioner of Education, with clear evidence that the administration is providing school boards with information about:

- School performance or “delivery targets”
- “Resources and support systems” - information that the administration is providing its schools with appropriate classroom resources and access to technology; and,
- School facilities being properly maintained and providing an appropriate environment for students to progress.

But more than providing information, the administration must be able to show that questions are being answered and conversations on these topics are occurring, Dotson said.

For some school systems, Dotson said, complying with these new reporting requirements is going to be a major change. But he also feels that Harrison County’s transition to this new system of evaluation will not be difficult.

In several recent school board meetings, Dotson has grouched a bit about the added level of reporting to the state, but he said it’s because he feels that the school board minutes clearly reflect that these required conversations are already going on.

“Harrison County’s School Board is composed of professional leaders and educators. They know what the measures are for a good school system and they would know if Harrison County was not heading in a positive direction,” Dotson said.

The transcripts and agendas of the monthly school board meeting show that all of these conversations upon which a superintendent should be judged are occurring, he said.

He also said that if school board members or other members of the community have concerns, his office or that of his administrative team are there to answer those concerns.

“I understand the reason that the state is requiring documentation. Unfortunately there have been instances where corrupt administrators have misled their boards and allowed Kentucky school districts to fail. The state needs assurances that superintendents are being held accountable by the school boards for the performance of their school districts,” Dotson said.

If a superintendent is being given favorable evaluations and pay raises while district test scores consistently rank at the bottom of the scale, then the state has a compelling reason to investigate why that’s happening, Dotson said.

On the other hand, though, well-intentioned ideas to ensure schools improvement could become a hindrance in itself.

“I think it’s wise, sometimes, for everyone to step back and look at the larger picture. Is there a point where the demand for documentation begins to have a negative impact on a school district’s ability to put students first,” Dotson said.

It’s early in the implementation of this change in the assessment model. Too early, he said, to judge if his concerns are valid. But he has commented on many occasions that the welfare and achievement of students must be the most important function of a school system. If a process gets in the way of that goal, then the process needs to be changed.

NRCS breakfast is March 6

The Harrison County Conservation District is hosting the annual Conservation Breakfast meeting on March 6 at the Cooperative Extension Office.

Richard Bowling, NRCS Grazing Specialist, will be speaking about the benefits of Rotational Grazing and Rotational Grazing System Design. The key to a successful rotational grazing system is proper ending grazing heights, the rest period for forage regrowth, a system laid out for ease of movement and the ability to make paddock subdivisions.

A meal of eggs, sausage, biscuits and gravy, fruit, coffee and juice will be served beginning at 8 a.m., with the program beginning shortly thereafter. Please call ahead if you know you will be attending, last minute attendees are welcome, but the more people we know are coming the better prepared we will be to serve everyone a hot meal. RSVP by calling Kayleigh Evans at 859-234-5876 or by emailing Kayleigh.evans@ky.nacdnet.net.

Snow pack leaves evidence of wildlife

Yesterday, 4:30 p.m., after shedding my city boots for my country boots, I headed back out the door with my egg basket and a jug of water.

Our two livestock guardian dogs were by my side as we headed back to the barn.

In the blink of an eye, Baxter and Finca took off in full defense mode towards our hens and the barn. Baxter took the front and Finca took the back. And, to my bewilderment, a beautiful coyote was flushed from beyond and the dogs followed pursuit. Wiley coyote hit the frozen lake and the dogs circled.

At one point, Baxter, the Maremma who has remarkable speed, over shot the target and ran over the hill; meanwhile, Finca, the Great Pyrenees, who has might and determination, sat on the dam while Wiley Coyote sat down in the middle of the frozen lake.

I share the detail because I started thinking that this is probably the same creature I wrote about several months ago when we woke to an early morning pursuit between Finca and something. I was without my glasses at 3 a.m. that morning so I could not confirm what

Jeneen Wiche
Columnist
www.SwallowRailFarm.com

was circling a perennial bed with Finca in sleepy pursuit.

That morning it seemed the creature was playing a game with Finca, a certain kind of Wiley taunt. I could imagine the creature thinking, “I can run in circles and wear this big white thing out!”

I saw this yesterday, too, when this beautiful coyote sat down and looked at Finca as to say, “I dare you, again, big lumbering white thing!”

At this point I was still an interested observer. And, in fact, Finca did take the dare, and took to his pursuit on the icy lake.

Baxter showed up and the team successfully chased Wiley away.

At one point, even Wiley literally tucked and turned tail when Finca got close.

I hope that Wiley understands that Finca and Baxter are not to be underestimated. And, I am happy to report that no chickens were involved in the incident. Knock on wood, please.

Since it all ended well it lifted my spirits a bit. After all the ice and snow and cold and broken limbs and frozen water buckets, I needed a pick me up.

And at that moment, I was glad there was all that snow and ice because I had a map to follow and study.

I compared the huge paw prints of the LGD’s and the small prints of the coyote at its various gates.

I could determine that Wiley was not just there yesterday being chased, but I could follow the trail all about the orchard, around the berries and asparagus. Amazingly, the tracks ambled a few 100 feet from the barn where 80 chickens were hanging out and about.

So, if I could communicate with coyotes, I would ask that they focus on the rabbit population. The coyote tracks were next to rabbit tracks.

So, maybe some outdoor tracking is in your future, too. Walk about and investigate and you may be surprised what you see in the snow.

Is it a bird, a raccoon, a skunk or opossum?

Maybe a fox or coyote is in your midst, too? I am starting to see nature’s designs everywhere I trek in the snow. It is a good winter distraction as we wait for the ice to melt.

I will remember that tracking in the snow is more fun than the mud that is to come.

Cooperative Dove Field Program enrollment underway

Kentucky farmers can earn extra cash by enrolling in the Cooperative Dove Field Program. Enrollment is currently underway and continues until March 1.

The Cooperative Dove Field Program pays landowners to lease fields on their property for public dove hunting.

“Landowners may earn up to $10,000 in the Cooperative Dove Field Program,” said Rocky Pritchert, migratory bird biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. “They earn $300 per acre planted.”

Pritchert said the department will accept fields ranging from six to 30 acres with additional payments for buffers around fields.

“Fields generally run from 20 to 30 acres in size,” he explained. “But, we encourage anyone interested to apply.”

Farmers may plant an idle field to sunflowers, millet or another acceptable crop for a public dove field by working with a Kentucky Fish and Wildlife private lands biologist and following some simple guidelines.

Payment amounts depend on the number of acres enrolled, crop type and fulfillment of the plot management agreement with Kentucky Fish and Wildlife.

To get the process started, landowners must contact their Kentucky Fish and Wildlife private lands biologist or Natural Resources Conservation Service liaison. For a listing of biologists, visit on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife’s homepage at fwky.gov and click on the “Contact Us” tab at the top of the page. Property owners may also call the department at 1-800-858-1549 for more information.

The Most Important Thing

About 20 years ago, I was in the military. I had a great job, new car, name brand clothes, and enough money. I thought I was really living it up.

What a great life or so I thought. I was living high on the proverbial hog. Things couldn't be any better.

Then I became disabled. All of a sudden the new car, the money, the clothes and the job didn't seem all that important. It's amazing sometimes what it takes to bring us around to what is really important in life.

While I was in the hospital I took some time to re-evaluate what I thought was truly important. It wasn't so much things, as it was relationships. When I became disabled I lost everything that I had thought was valuable and discovered what was really important.

I found out family is important. We usually take for granted that they will always be there. It seems like when you need them the most, a good family is there for you whether you have things or not.

My dad, mom, and my extended family were very supportive during this time. Fancy clothes and a new car didn't impress them very much. They already knew what was valuable.

I also found out friends are valuable. There are those friends that stick closer than a brother (Proverbs 18:24). There are those friends, like family, that love you for who you are and not for what you can give them. They are true friends indeed.

I also rediscovered my relationship with Jesus.

Jesus has a way of getting your attention and bringing things into perspective.

When it comes time to look at things for what they really are, God has a way of becoming more real and personal during very trying time if we allow Him to.

That relationship with the Lord became the most valuable thing in my life. I haven't always done everything exactly right. But there God is, waiting to become valuable to you.

Matthew 19:22 "But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions."

Here in Matthew the story is told of a rich young man. He had great possessions and asked Jesus what he needs to do to get eternal life. Jesus quotes to him the last five commandments.

The young man said he had kept all these. Then Jesus tells him to go and sell all that he has and give to the poor. He goes away sad, because he had great possessions.

I went through a similar thing early in my life, though I didn't have to sell everything, I did lose quite a bit but what I gained was far greater.

What it means to love someone

I've always said motherhood is easy when you don't have kids.

Likewise, it's easy to be married when you're not. When you're not married and you're only dreaming about it, you imagine the ideal. In your imagination, you and your spouse say and do all the right things, and even your arguments are sweet and making up is rosy.

In real life, however, marriage gets thorny, and sometimes bloody.

Mostly, it's just regular, with a few blips and annoyances along the way.

Recently, I was with a group of women talking about husbands, as women often do. I shared with them some excerpts from a funny little book about husbands that I found years ago called "I Love Him, But..."

For example, one entry said: "I love him, but he growls at the dog, just to make it clear who's the boss."

Another said, "I love him, but he leaves the kitchen cabinets and drawers open. All the time. If it's dark, I walk into them and nearly get knocked out."

"I love him, but he loves horse art. The house is full of horse paintings – bad, good, old, new. You can almost smell the hay – or worse."

"I love him, but he saves things. He loved our cat, so

Nancy Kennedy

he saved her hairballs. Cat's been dead 10 years. He's still got her hairballs in his nightstand."

I could add a few of my own, but I won't.

It's a funny little book, but in a way, the premise of it really isn't all that loving, because it focuses on another person's annoying habits and quirks. When that's your focus, (well, mine at least; I can't speak for you) you – I – start thinking, "If only this person's flaws would go away, I could love him or her better."

But it's not love if the burden or fault is placed on the other person.

I remember years ago being in a women's Bible study that turned into a husband-trashing session and leaving there feeling icky. Although I hadn't participated, I knew at times I had been guilty of concentrating on negatives – and in any relationship there are negatives.

With the women I was with the other day, we talked about the little book, but reversing it. Instead of: "I love him, but (fill in the blank with quirk or flaw), we would reverse it to say, "He does this or that, but I love him."

The original way ends with the flaw, so that's what you're left thinking about. That's where you stay parked.

But when you reverse it, you're left with the love.

Such a little thing, but so transformative.

It reminds me of a friend who had been going through a rough time in her marriage and didn't really like her husband all that much. As his 40th birthday approached, her counselor suggested that she make a list of 40 things she admired and appreciated about her husband.

BBB names top 10 scams of 2013

Every year, BBB receives thousands of calls and emails from consumers who have been scammed. Some scams are widespread, getting a lot of people for small amounts. Others are more narrowly focused, but take people for thousands or tens of thousands of dollars. Here are BBB's Top Scams of 2013:

Medical Alert Scam – With promises of a "free" medical alert system, the scam targeted seniors and caretakers and claimed to be offering the system free of charge because a family member or friend had already paid for it. In many cases, seniors were asked to provide their bank account or credit information to "verify" their identity and, as a result, were charged the monthly $35 service fee. The system never arrived and the seniors were left with a charge they had trouble getting refunded. Be wary of "free" offers that require your personal information upfront.

Auction Reseller Scam – Many people turn to Ebay and other online auctions sites to sell used items they no longer need, and relatively new electronics seem to do especially well. But scammers have figured out a way to fool sellers into shipping goods without receiving payment. Usually the buyer claims it's an "emergency" of some sort – a child's birthday, a member of the military shipping out – and asks the seller to ship the same day. The seller receives an email that looks like it's from PayPal confirming the payment, but emails are easy to fake. Always confirm payment in your Ebay and PayPal accounts before shipping.

Arrest Warrant Scam – In this scam, con artists are taking advantage of technology that can change what is visible on Caller ID, and allowing them to pose as the office of the local sheriff or other law enforcement agency. They call to say there is a warrant out for your arrest, but that you can pay a fine in order to avoid criminal charges. Of course, these "police" don't take credit cards; only a wire transfer or pre-paid debit card will do. Sometimes these scams seem very personal; the scammer may refer to a loan or other financial matter. It may just be a lucky guess, but don't be fooled into thinking you are about to be arrested.

Invisible Home Improvements – Home improvement scams vary little from year to year, and most involve some type of shoddy workmanship from unlicensed or untrained workers. The hardest for homeowners to detect, are repairs or improvements to the areas of your home that you can't see: roofs, chimneys, air ducts, crawl spaces, etc. Scammers may simply knock at your door offering a great deal because they were "in the neighborhood," but more and more they are using telemarketing, email, and even social media to reach homeowners. Check out home contractors at bbb.org before saying yes.

Scam of the Year: Affordable Care Act Scam - Scammers used the Affordable Care Act ("Obamacare") as a way to fool Americans into sharing their personal information. Scammers would call claiming to be from the federal government and saying the would-be victim needed a new insurance card or Medicare card. However, before they can mail the card, they need to collect personal information. Scammers do a lot to make their requests seem credible. For example, they may have your bank's routing number and ask you to provide your account number. Or, they may ask for your credit card or Social Security number, Medicare ID, or other personal information. Sharing personal information with a scammer puts you at risk for identity theft.

Fillies win 1 of 3 as season winds down

By MIKE ALDRIDGE, SPORTS WRITER

The Harrison County Fillies faced three very good teams over the last week losing two games at home but claiming a come-from-behind victory at East Jessamine last Saturday.

Thursday evening the Lady Bears from Bracken County visited the Hilltop with a very experienced and veteran lineup to face the Harrison County girls.

Coach Patrick Kelsch started four seniors and brought three others off the bench for his 14-5 Lady Bears.

Turnovers were the issue for the Fillies as they have been for most of the games where the Harrison County team lost.

During the first quarter, the Harrison County squad battled the visitors close with the score 14 to 10 in favor of the Lady Bears at the end of the period.

Harrison County only had four miscues in this period and was within four points despite very hot shooting (60%) for Bracken County.

Unfortunately, in the second and third periods, the turnovers jumped from four to seven in the second quarter and to 12 in the third. That's when the Lady Bears pulled away on the scoreboard en route to the final 57 to 44 score.

The Bracken County lead went from four to 12 points at the half and then to 19 at the end of the third period.

The ball handling issues caused Bracken County to have more field goal attempts and a very good field goal percentage.

Only poor foul shooting by the Lady Bears kept them from running away with the game.

This was the story for the game as the Lady Bears went to the foul line 31 times and made only 16 of them.

At the same time, the Fillies only made 11 trips to the charity stripe connecting on seven.

Harrison County dominated the boards 31 to 10, but the 27-to-10 turnover ratio was too much to overcome against a team that is a region contender.

Jordan Doram led the Fillies with 18 points and 12 rebounds while Madison Philpot and Chelsea Ingram each scored nine points.

Sophomore Bailey Cummins, who is Bracken County's leading scorer, scored 20 points for the night with senior guard Emma Conley adding 10.

Saturday was an uncertain day for the Harrison County basketball teams as the home game for the boys with Collins and the girls match at East Jessamine were both jeopardized by the snow.

By late morning, however, it was learned that both would be played.

The girls faced a talented squad at East Jessamine with a 15-7 record and an excited home crowd.

This played to the Lady Jaguars' favor as they jumped out to an early lead. The Fillies trimmed it to 13-11 by the end of the first period.

East Jessamine extended the margin to 11 at the half at 30-19 as they were able to make some difficult shots and cause a few Fillies' miscues.

The halftime mood was very relaxed and emotion free, according to Coach Kim Furnish.

"We just let the girls relax and focus on what they could do to make the team effort more successful," she noted. "We were not in foul trouble and felt like we knew what we had to do to cut into the deficit."

The Fillies did just that as they began to whittle down the East Jessamine advantage cutting it to three points by the end of the third stop at 37 to 34.

Harrison County's defense in this period and its ability to handle the ball were key in the comeback.

The comeback continued in the fourth period with the Fillies pulling out the 49 to 47 victory over the very quality Jaguars.

The win improved Harrison County's record to 10-16 while East Jessamine fell to 15-8. Doram led the Fillies with 19 points while Philpot joined her in double figures with 12.

The Scott High Lady Eagles visited the Hilltop Monday night with a 14-11 record and a young but very talented lineup.

It was Senior Night for the Fillies as an emotional good bye was said to seniors Doram and Haley Perkins.

The Fillies appeared to be caught up in the emotion of the night as they played poorly and with little confidence in the first quarter falling behind 14 to 4 at the end of the

Breds lose two more leads, two more games, face Estill Thursday

By MIKE ALDRIDGE, SPORTS WRITER

The Harrison County Thorobreds faced the 15th rated Collins Titans Saturday night on the Hilltop in a game that had an all too familiar ending for the Thorobreds.

After compiling a 12-point halftime lead, the Thorobreds were outscored 33 to 19 in the second half to lose the Senior Night game.

The game started with the four seniors, Dillon Pulliam, Mason Ritchie, Landon Palmer and long-time manager Russell Crosthwaite in the line up along with junior D.J. Jenkins.

Crosthwaite made the first basket and departed the game after his basket was matched on the scoreboard for Collins.

For the longest time, it appeared that Crosthwaite's basket was all the Breds were going to score but finally Pulliam hit on a three pointer from the corner to give Harrison County the lead.

Collins came back as the first quarter ended with a low scoring total of nine to eight in favor of the visiting Titans.

The Thorobreds warmed up in the second session while the Titans really cooled off making only one of 11 shots in the second period.

Harrison County made eight of 13 from the field to race out to the 25 to 13 lead at the end of the half.

The two teams battled evenly for the third period with Collins jumping out early reminiscent of the previous Saturday's Harrison County collapse. This time the Breds fought back nearly matching the Titans from the floor in the period.

The issue for the Breds in the third quarter was turnovers as the Breds matched their first half total of five in the third quarter.

Harrison County still led 35 to 27 going into the final period.

The Titans, despite playing without leading scorer Ralphie Stone who was out with grade issues, battled back in the final period.

Junior guard Deion Cochran hit two three pointers and, along with fellow junior Brent Kidwell, led Collins to a 19-to-9 advantage in the fourth period to secure the win.

The Thorobreds had one last chance with 10 seconds left in the game. The inbounds pass could not go to junior guard Jenkins as diagramed but instead was passed to senior Grant Carr.

Carr, with time running out and his fellow teammates stationary, drove to the basket where he collided with Collins' senior Paul Miller. Carr was charged with an offensive foul which allowed the clock to run out and Collins to secure the victory.

"It was frustrating to watch," said Thorobreds' coach Larry Kendall. "Hopefully we will learn from it. The schedule is not getting any easier."

Cochran with 15 and Kidwell with 14 led the Titans in scoring. Juniors Trent Thompson with 14 and Jenkins with 12 led the Thorobreds.

Monday night was an example of it not getting any easier as the Breds traveled north to do battle with 7th ranked Holmes.

The Bulldogs feature one of the best players in the state in junior guard James "Beetle" Bolden. However, they were coming off a confidence-shaking, 15-point loss the previous weekend to No. 5 Newport Central Catholic.

Bolden was eight minutes late for a practice Sunday so he sat for the first quarter and part of the second.

Not to be outdone, Harrison County also sat one of its better players, leading scorer Jenkins, who missed all of Sunday's practice. The two teams were each missing a key cog in their machinery.

The game started slowly for both teams as neither could connect from the floor on a regular basis in the first half.

Harrison County was slightly more accurate than the Bulldogs as they took

Harrison wrestlers finish third in region, Mattox and Lopez champs

Michael Mattox, first at 106 pounds and Nathan Lopez first at 126 pounds

Qualify 11 of 13 for state finals

By MIKE ALDRIDGE, SPORTS WRITER

In what was probably the understatement of the year, Coach Luke Tucker said, "We had a pretty good day."

Tucker was referring to the Harrison County wrestlers' performance at the Region 8 in Ashland.

The Thorobreds finished third as a team one-half point behind second place Montgomery County while Johnson Central won the meet with 238 points.

There were several surprises in the meet with two of the most noticeable Brent Hudgins and Mark Taylor. Hudgins, who is in the seventh grade weighing 80 pounds, wrestled in the 113 lbs. division. He finished fourth and qualified for the state meet. Taylor also was fourth and qualified for state wrestling in the 195 lbs. division.

The catch here is that Taylor is usually a 152 lbs. class wrestler.

Another big surprise for the Thorobreds was Brandon Williams' defeat of the No. 8-rated wrestler in the state in the 170 lbs. class, which qualified him for the state meet.

The 6th seeded Williams took a 6-5 decision over Johnson Central's Samuel Griffith in a major upset.

Not to be overlooked in all of the upsets was the fact that Michael Mattox and Nathan Lopez wrestled their way to the Region 8 championship.

Mattox was 3-0 with two pins that were each over in less than a minute and a 6-2 decision over Johnson Central's Joe Slone.

Lopez was 2-0 with a pin over Braden Wyatt of Bourbon County and an 8-2 decision over Dylan Francis of Johnson Central.

The state qualifiers are Michael Mattox, Brent Hudgins, Chase Highlander, Nathan Lopez, Colin Coy, Mason Fryman, Brandon Williams, Clay Arthur, Mark Taylor, Kellon Williams, and

MIKE'S MINUTE

Events other than basketball going on

We talked quite a bit Saturday on the radio about baseball, softball and car racing, which brought some good natured kidding from the basketball faithful of Harrison County.

After all, the Cats were playing Florida and we are only one week from the district tournament so all eyes should be on the round ball action.

Also, the Lady Cats were playing Tennessee, as well, so what else could there be but basketball?

NASCAR has its biggest event this Sunday with the Daytona 500 and I bet there are some who care about that little race.

We have at least two former Fillies who are playing softball, Michelle Carson for NKU and Ashley Coppage for Georgetown College. Michelle is struggling some at the plate but has started every game for the Atlantic 10 Lady Norse squad. Ashley hit a home run in her first collegiate at bat Sunday as the Georgetown Lady Tigers swept Union College in a double-header.

Closer to home at the high school, the Harrison County wrestlers qualified 11 of 13 wrestlers for the state tournament as they finished third in the region held at Ashland Saturday.

Michael Mattox and Nathan Lopez were Region 8 champions in their weight classes with spectacular performances all day in Ashland.

Our archery teams in the elementary and high school divisions each qualified for the national competition and the middle school team barely missed making it.

Harrison County had the highest male score in the competition as Kyle Yearsley took those honors.

The Harrison County High School cheerleaders in Orlando finished 12th after qualifying again for the finals.

The Harrison County Middle School cheerleaders won overall in their conference at all cheerleaders' favorite place to win, George Rogers Clark.

Shaylee Carter was third overall in the state bowling championships in Lexington and though the bowling teams did not finish high in the state meet, they know that they are almost there as the teams that did win own narrow victories over both the boys and girls bowling teams.

So you see there is quite a bit going on other than basketball, but yes, the district starts next Monday in Falmouth.

I am very concerned about two parts of the district. The first and most important part is the teams and how they will be readied to play.

Both have had some tough losses as of late and that can take a toll on young players.

The second concern is parking. I am sure that the Pendleton County people have this under control, but it concerns me. It will be hard to take care of the crowd so I hope that they are prepared.

Baseball Alumni looking for nominations for second class

Baseball season is near and that means it is time to get nominations in for the second class for the Cynthiana-Harrison County Baseball Hall of Fame. Applications must be completed and received before April 1, 2014, to be considered.

A requirement this season will be that all information must be completed, including year of graduation, life accomplishments after baseball and any college/lifetime achievements.

Applications are provided on line at the Cynthiana-Harrison County Alumni Baseball Association website or will be provided upon request to any board member or by contacting Ron England via email at ron.england@ymail.com.

The second class will be installed on June 28 at the Cynthiana Elks Lodge at 6 p.m. with a social gathering at 5:30 p.m.

Tickets will be available for $15 per adult and $5 per child under the age of 10. All proceeds are placed in the Alumni Association Scholarship Fund. Scholarships are awarded to graduating Thorobreds baseball players to help further their education.

All applications are retained and considered for five years and any former Harrison County or Cynthiana High School baseball player is eligible. The nominee must have graduated 15 years before he can be nominated. An individual can nominate more than one person.

period.

During the first quarter, Scott's young lineup of two eighth graders, a sophomore, a junior and a senior also started a little slow but picked up the scoring and aggressiveness to forge into the lead.

The rest of the game was played evenly with the Fillies finding themselves. Despite Doram battling foul trouble, they were outscored by only one for the rest of the game falling 58 to 47.

Turnovers were again a huge problem for the Fillies as they committed 18 through the first three quarters.

The fourth period began with the Harrison County squad trailing by 12 at 39 to 27.

Harrison County rallied to cut into the lead getting as close as six points but running out of time before they could close the deal.

Scott High shot 20 free throws in the fourth quarter and were successful on 11.

Harrison County attempted five free throws for the game with Doram going four for five. Scott High attempted 29 for the game.

"We came out passive and out of sync," said Furnish. "After the first quarter we changed to a man-to-man which worked better. We then switched back and forth which helped us cut into the lead."

After the game the senior girls were honored with a reception.

"We have been fortunate to have these two here playing for us at Harrison County," Furnish remarked speaking of Doram and Perkins. "Whatever they decide to do in life they will be successful because of their great work habits."

Doram led all scorers with 24 points followed by Madison Philpot who had 15. Sophomore Holly Kahlmeyer led Scott High with 14 while 8th grader Ally Niece chipped in with 11 points.

Harrison County wraps up the regular season Thursday with Estill County on the hilltop at 8 p.m. and at Montgomery County on Friday at 6 p.m. Both are parts of boy/girl doubleheaders.

Senior Jordan Doram calls to her teammates Monday night on the Hilltop.

a 20 to 14 lead into the locker room at halftime.

After the break, the Thorobreds again were able to edge out further on the Bulldogs. They grabbed the biggest lead of the game halfway through the stanza at 27-16.

The play of the game happened with 3:14 to play in the third period when an unnecessary forearm by sophomore Markel McClendon gained him and the Holmes team a technical foul.

While the Holmes bench protested, Jenkins made one of two free throws for a 30-to-20 Harrison County lead.

The momentum was changing as the Bulldogs were motivated by the technical. They began to play their controlled havoc game which took the Thorobreds out of their game plan.

The next three minutes saw the Bulldogs score 11 unanswered points to take the lead at 31 to 30.

This was the first lead for Holmes since the score was 1 to 0 in the beginning of the game.

Jenkins made a couple of free throws for a 32-31 lead for the Breds at the end of the third period but the lead that was once 11 points was gone.

The final period saw a dual between Bolden and Jenkins beginning with Bolden.

He made seven of his teams' next 10 points as the Bulldogs shot out to a 41-to-35 lead with a little over five minutes to play.

The Thorobreds were in jeopardy of losing their third double digit lead in three games.

The lead ballooned to 46 to 39 before Jenkins started to drive through the Holmes defense for two baskets making the score 46 to 43.

After a Bulldog free throw, Jenkins again slashed to the basket for a lay up cutting the score to 47 to 45.

The teams traded baskets and a free throw each so with 1:33 left in the game, Harrison County trailed 49 to 48.

Holmes scored to make it 51 to 48 and on the next possession put the ball on ice causing the Breds to have to foul. When the Breds fouled, the Bulldogs made their free throws as they made eight down the stretch to win the game 59 to 54.

For the game, the Bulldogs hit on 14 of 18 free throws as they were calm and cool under pressure at the line.

Holmes also out-rebounded Harrison County 31 to 26 led by seniors Marcus Hill and Quinton Chames who each grabbed 10. Dillon Pulliam led the Thorobreds with seven.

Bolden was the game's leading scorer with 19 points while Hill was also in double figures for Holmes with 12 points.

Jenkins led the Thorobreds with 18 points while Thompson scored 17 and Pulliam added 11.

Holmes improved to 21-5 with the win while the Breds dropped to 11-15.

The Breds finish the schedule Thursday with a 6 p.m. match up with Estill County on the Hilltop in a boy/girl doubleheader and on Friday with an 8 p.m. match up at Montgomery County in another boy/girl battle.
